STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

Camp-meeting at East Poland grounds August 10th, and continues over the following Sunday.

Mr. Fabyan now has one hundred and seventy-five men employed in his mills for the Lewiston water works.

Mr. James Baldwin, an elderly citizen of Livermore Falls, died suddenly of heart disease Monday morning.

The South Lebik Ladies' Union Circle raised money at their meetings last winter, and have paid for the entire parsonage, put new blinds on the house, repainted, papered, and it now presents a neat and tidy appearance.

Monday forenoon, a piece of rock, sent by a blast from the trench on College street extension at Lewiston, came down upon the roof of Messrs. Balch & Hodgkins' stable near by. It crashed through the roof and through the bottom of a sleigh which was stored in the attic. A plank beneath the sleigh was broken by the stone. By these obstacles the force of the missile was broken, and the boarding of the attic floor stopped in further descent. Directly beneath the spot where it struck was a valuable horse owned by the firm. The piece of rock was about the size of a man's head.

Cumberland.

There is an effort among the apothecaries of Portland to extend an invitation to the members of the State Pharmaceutical Association, to hold their next annual meeting at Portland.

David Wyer, of the firm of Wyer brothers of Portland, shook an ice tool through his foot the other day, inflicting a severe and very painful wound.

At a meeting of the Portland Mechanics' Cricket Club, recently, Dr. Batchelder presiding, the following officers were elected to fill vacancies: John F. Lynch, first lieutenant in place of T. H. Hasty resigned, and James E. Harris, second lieutenant, in place of W. H. Sawtelle resigned.

The Press says that Moody's lameness is a little less of C. J. Girard, of Saccarappa, was drowned in the river below the bridge. He was about seven years of age.

The Press says that the barn of Capt. Leonard Johnson at Cape Elizabeth Depot, was destroyed by fire about 1 o'clock Tuesday morning. All the live stock in the building with the exception of one pig which was burned, were got out.

The Press says that the blacksmith shop of Benj. B. Segars, at Upper Stroudwater, was burned last Saturday night with its entire contents. Loss about $600, with no insurance, which bears heavily on Mr. Segars. Origin of the fire unknown.

Kennebec.

The Journal says that during the past week, Fish Commissioner E. M. Gill, with seal Henry O. Stanley, accompanied by Messrs. Charles S. Allen and Everett Smith, civil engineer, have met the owners and occupants of the dams at Augusta, Waterville, Hallowell and Gardiner Mills, to see what the lines of fish ways are to be built at the places named, and hear what, if any exist, of any further delay in commencing the work. The owners unanimously agree to commence operations at once, and as soon as plans are perfected the work will go on, and can be completed before the salmon come running the present season.

The Journal says that Sarah Webber died in Dedo about 2 o'clock, aged 107 years. She has been a citizen within the town for upwards of forty-one years. There are also two others remaining who went to the place about the same time.

Somerset.

The Democrat says Isaac Holmes, and his son, Jacob Holmes, Jr., of Byron, were arrested on the 18th on charge of arson; they were examined on the 19th and 20th before a justice at Dixfield, and the charge of burning John Hemphrey's barn in '72, and burned over in the year of 1900 each to appear at the September term of court. Citizens' opinion seems about evenly divided as to their guilt. A few days since a horse belonging to Frank Kinney received a severe cut while in the pasture, the instrument in the hands of some miscreant. Many acts of malicious mischief have been perpetrated here within a few years past; property has been stolen or wantonly destroyed, for which no one has been brought to justice. If the Democrat says are guilty of any crime, unfortunately we are not the only ones; our people would breathe freer if some others could be ferreted from our midst. Some time ago Farrell a reward of $400 for the detection of the persons engaged in these acts, and Dr. John Houghton added another $100 to his own account.

A large bear has been after J. Hough-ton's (A. D. Owen's sheep, in Bingham's cove on the Kennebec, he followed Mr. H.'s sheep nearly to the house, three times in one afternoon but did not get any.

A sad accident occurred in the northern part of Brighton on the 7th inst., when Mrs. Mrs. Otis Howes, were on the way to church, Mr. H. alighted to open a gate on the road which leads to their house and to his surprise found a horse fastened at one end; reaching a second gate, he opened it and crushed it down, and quickly over Mr. H. drove a sharp cultivator which was lying on the ground, breaking his left leg above the ankle and cutting a gash in his knee. He was carried to a house, and died in a short time. The coroner's verdict was held on the 20th.

Somerset.

The survivors of the Nineteenth Maine planned to hold a re-union at Hallowell, August 20th.

Somerset.

There is to be a stallion race at Fairfield on the middle of August, for a purse of $1,000 open to all horses in Maine.

Washington.

The Republican says that on Sunday last Machias was visited by a heavy thunder shower. The lightning was very vivid. The store of W. E. Pennell was struck by lightning, the fluid striking the chimney and passing to the main timbers of the building and passed through the walls of the building. The chimney was so damaged that it was necessary to take it down, and rebuild it.

FROM PORTLAND.

Greenback Convention.

PORTLAND, Me., July 31. The Greenback First District Congressional Convention met in Congress Hall at 10 o'clock this morning. J. H. Hammond, of North Berwick, was Chairman. Candidates were called upon to express their sentiments, and L. H. Gove, of Biddeford, Elliot King, of Portland; Chas. E. Clifford, of Portland; Rev. W. H. Eaton, of Cape Elizabeth, addressed the Convention, all declaiming rapidly against the tyranny of capital.—The committee on Credentials reported [illegible]

MASSACHUSETTS.

Butler's Communist.

NEW YORK, July 31. A San Francisco letter to the Graphic, says: Kearney's trip is simply the fulfillment of an engagement to stump Massachusetts for General Butler, with the understanding that his speeches will be written for him.

FROM FOREIGN.

Wm. Evarts, Esq., Stated's Proposition.

NEW YORK, July 31. It is said that Sitting Bull has made overtures to the Indian Department to be allowed to return to the United States, but does not want to be held accountable for past originality, and wants to keep his ponies and those belonging to his nine hundred warriors. The department declines to entertain the proposition.

The Campaign Against the Moollies.

WASHINGTON, July 31. General Howard telegraphs Hon. Secretary Evarts, the 29th inst., as Bull's City as follows: The crisis of the campaign is certainly passed. The check at Columbia serves to keep peace north of that river. The Bannocks and Piutes flowing southward have not fully separated.

NEW YORK STATE.

The Saratoga Races.

SARATOGA, July 31. "The first race, of a mile dash, for a purse of $700, all ages, was won by Brambler; time, 1-47. The second race, two mile dash, for $500, was won by Albert; time, 3.41. The third race, for Saratoga stakes, 1 mile, won by Harold; time, 1.50.

NEW YORK CITY.

A Terrible Explosive.

NEW YORK, July 31. James Gresham had an office in the candy factory of Greenfield & Sons, which was blown up in December last, but the cause of which was never ascertained. It appears that Gresham has discovered and manufactured a terrible explosive, made from naptha, charged with electricity, which has a power far in excess of any known explosive. He sells it only to the Russian Government. It is now believed it was this explosive that caused that disaster.

The Schwab.

Chief Schwab has sued two police officers for $5000 for arresting him because they found his beer shop open a few minutes after twelve on Sunday night. Schwab contends that he kept his place closed till twelve, and then, as it was Monday morning, opened. He wants to test the power of the police in the excise matter. Chief Justice Shea refused warrants for the arrest of the police officers, as such a course would interfere with their duties. Schwab will prosecute the matter to the utmost.

WASHINGTON.

The Chinese Embassy.

NEW YORK, July 31. President Hayes informed an agent of the Chinese Embassy that his reception of them would be far different from that at San Francisco.

As the Representative of the Fourth District he believed he had voted always for the best interests of the country, for the poor as well as the rich, and in accepting a re-nomination, he would state most emphatically that if elected he should give his votes and his labors for the interest of his constituency. He would in no case favor or vote for subsidies for any so-called "steals," His wish would be to meet the wishes and work for the best interests of all. He believed most fully in the sterling principles of the Republican party and in working for the fulfillment of these principles.

Mr. Purvis's speech was brief, but earnest and he was often interrupted by the warm applause of the Convention.

D. F. Davis in behalf of the Committee on Resolutions submitted the following report which was accepted by the Convention:

WHEN A WIDOW.

THE WORLD IS APT TO SAY A KIND WORD WHEN IT SPEAKS OF A WIDOW.

The widow Cassidy was standing at the door of her little millinery store in Belmont Avenue the other evening, as Mr. Costello came along. Mr. Costello stopped.

"Good even' to you, ma'am," said he.

"Good evenin' to you, Mr. Costello," answered the widow.

"It's fine weather we're havin', ma'am," continued Mr. Costello.

"It is that, Mr. Costello," replied the widow, "though, for the matter of that, it seems to me it's both great and small."

"Ah!" said Mr. Costello, "that for all that it doesn't come to us all alike. Now, here you are, ma'am, I, now, am green enough to be taken as a simple country lad, a calf beside you a vixter round."

"A little, would ye say, now?" interrupted the widow, laughing. "Much an old bachelor like you knows about ripples of women. But come in, Mr. Costello, for I was to say what I'd say with me, for I was so much in the way of it, and, besides as the people passing by do dreadfully talk, like, and I'm sure the walls must have very good ears."

Mr. Costello needed no second invitation. The widow led the way into her little parlor, where a cheerful fire was burning in the grate, and a cozy tea-table was spread. "Now, Mr. Costello," says she, "you've been a good bit in the world, I'm sure, and have seen a deal between us," says she, "an' I could give ye a good character to any place," says he, an' I wish you could do the same for me where I'm goin'," says he, 'but it's most equal," says he, "agen' me as for me. I'm an old bachelor, so, you know, I'll never grow in a bit then Father Odrie and himself," says he, but I say now," says he, "that I've always been a tried son of the church," says he so I'll not bother my brains about that," says he, says he, "I have ye to good health, Mrs. Cassidy, an' I wish you ever, besides," says he, "an' if at any time see any way ye like better nor me, marry them, says he. "Ah, Mrs. Cassidy, it was the first time speakin' it seemed like, "Ah, Mrs. what is the world to a man when his wife is a-lyin' in her grave, an' I'll have no more for master, an' the first I love to remember," says he, an' I needn't tell ye to be a good mother to the children," says he, "for well we know there are none." "Ah, poor Joe! I will ye have a nother cup o'tay, Mr. Costello?"

"It must have been very hard on ye," said Mr. Costello. "Thank ye, ma'am, for answer."

"It was hard," said Mrs. Cassidy, and "best those left." "I must earn dinner for me own livin'; an' as I go," said I, "I place, an' here I am, to-day."

"Ah!" said Mr. Costello, at they rose from the table and seated themselves before the fire, "an' here we are both of us this evening."

"Here we are, sure enough," rejoined the widow.

"An' so I mind ye of—of him, do I?" asked Mr. Costello, after a pause, during which he had gazed contemplatively into the fire.

"That ye do!" answered the widow. "Ye favor him greatly, only completed an the same genial smile."

"Now with me will," says, an' you sit there beside me, ye might almost think ye were married again," said Mr. Costello.

"Oh go 'long now for a case that ye are!" exclaimed the widow, passing her apron across her eyes.

"Mrs. Cassidy," what is it was for you about me?" says ye liked better nor a little money." Out of the way with it!

"He said, said he," answered the widow, snuggling her apron over her knees with her plump white hands, "often, says he, 'if only there ye was a man ye like better nor me, Mary Ann,' said he.

"Did he say so?" asked Mr. Costello. "Ye liked as good as him," added Mr. Costello.

"I don't mind that in all," answered the widow, reflectively, folding her hands in her lap.

"Ye mean to 'bet that to yourself?" asked Costello.

"Well, sir! I don't know, then," answered Mrs. Cassidy.

"Ye think to like me as well as ye did him?" asked Mr. Costello particularly, leaning forward to look into the widow's eyes, "that I can't say."

"Ah, so very now for a case," explained the widow, straightening herself and playfully slapping Mr. Costello on the knee.

He moved his chair still nearer and took her hand in his.

"Then you like me, Mrs. Cassidy," said Mr. Costello, said the widow, looking boldly at him.

"Ah, man," he replied, "do ye like me as I like you?"

"Ah, Mr. Costello, how could I tell?" answered the widow, looking down and blushing.

"Ah, Mrs. Cassidy, I can't tell you how much I like you," said he, "and how much I want you to like me."

"Ah, Mr. Costello, how could I tell?" answered the widow, looking down and blushing.

"Ah, Mrs. Cassidy, I can't tell you how much I like you," said he, "and how much I want you to like me."

"Ah, Mr. Costello, how could I tell?" answered the widow, looking down and blushing.
